

Pollution from litter in our oceans and waterways is a critical component of the broader ecological challenges facing our planet. This issue extends beyond aesthetics, impacting human health, endangering wildlife, and affecting economies globally. As EcoServants, we're dedicated to tackling all ecological issues, and marine litter is a significant one that we can actively mitigate. By collecting data as Citizen Scientists, you contribute invaluable information that aids in this fight. Please submit your findings to info@ecoservantsproject.org, joining our global effort to restore ecological balance and ensure the health of the Earth.

